WOMEN AND LEADERSHIP IN INTERNATIONAL RELATIONS - 2.ED
15-16-17 November 2023

The IAI course "Women and Leadership in International Relations", created in collaboration with WIIS (Women in International Security) Italy, aims to promote the professional development of women, providing participants with theoretical and practical tools and integrating studies on social processes with those of gender. It also wants to explore, going beyond cultural stereotypes and preconceptions, the opportunities and challenges that women have to face on the international scene, to deconstruct the transmission system of inequalities and understand contemporary changes.

Educational programme

The intensive course will take place over 3 days (in the afternoon slots) on 15, 16 and 17 November, entirely online.

The course is in Italian, with the possibility of some modules in English.

The program is structured according to an interactive and modular teaching approach, which alternates seminar moments with debates and practical activities aimed at promoting female professional development, providing participants with theoretical and practical tools and integrating studies on social processes with those of gender. It also wants to explore, going beyond cultural stereotypes and preconceptions, the opportunities and challenges that women have to face on the international scene, to deconstruct the transmission system of inequalities and understand contemporary changes.

The teaching staff is made up of experts, researchers from the Istituto Affari Internazionali competent for the subject, the WIIS (Women in International Security) network and representatives of public and private institutions.

The course includes the following teaching modules:

- gender issues, equality, human rights and political changes;
- role of women in international contexts, linked to development or crisis situations;
- assessment of the impact of gender policies in the social and international sphere;
- leadership communication.

The following laboratory activities are planned:

- Tools for preparing analyses, strategic reports and documents for public dissemination.
- Management of situations of uncertainty and risk.
- Public speaking.
- Activities aimed at improving time and goal management.

For whom is this course intended?

The Course "Women and Leadership in International Relations" is designed to offer in-depth thematic and area analysis to those with a background in social sciences (Political Science, Economics, Law) and with a specific interest in gender dynamics and studies.
